Tiger area rose 30% in 12 years: Study

Chetan Chauhan

letters@hindustantimes.com

NEW DELHI: Tigers expanded their area by around 30% (33,127 sq km) between 2006 and 2018 with the most increase seen in proximity to protected areas (and in areas with lower population densities and higher wealth), highlighting the possibility of human and tiger coexistence, a new paper says.

Although the success of tiger recovery is highlighted by the feline population doubling in this period, from 1,411 to 2,967, the study, titled "Tiger Recovery Amid People and Poverty" said that the population growth is in line with the intended flagship role of the tiger in conserving and increasing biodiverse areas -- it credits tigers for an increase in the numbers of other species in tiger habitats such as leopards. elephants, sloth bear and gaur (Indian bison).

The tiger population has since increased to 3,682 in 2022.

The study, by top tiger conser-vationists, V Y Jhala, Rajesh Gopal, Omar Qureshi and Ninad Avinash Mungi is based on the tiger census done once every four vears by the Central government in tiger landscapes of the country and examined close to 3,000 grids, each covering 10 square kilometers, of tiger areas.

The study said that the area

The feline population doubled in this period from 1,411 to 2,967 where tigers are found increased from 66,389 sq km in 2002 to 99,516 sq km in 2018 with 45% of the growth in area recorded between 2014 and 2018. "Overall, tiger occupancy increased by 30% over the span of the study...Colonization was higher in grid cells that were in proximity to tiger-occupied protected areas, with higher prey abundance, suitable habitats, low human density, and moderately wealthy ....

Out of the 1973 grid cells occupied by tigers, 25% were in the core area of tiger reserves or within national parks, 20% were in tiger reserve buffers or wildlife sanctuaries. 10% were in tiger habitat corridors and the remaining 45% were in human multipleuse habitats. "A large proportion of tiger-occupied habitats (45%) was shared with 60 million people in India," the study said.

The study pointed out that recovery of large carnivores in fragmented habitats amid crowded and poverty-ridden regions of the global south is a difficult proposition and is often enforced through a "dogmatic" vision of separating people from predators. The alternative of land sharing, between the people and predators is critiqued as unattainable as it could "exacerbate" conflict. "Land sparing and land sharing are looked on as opposing views...we demonstrated that both views of land sparing and land sharing were required for recovering tiger populations across India, suggesting that both paradigms play a part in the future of large carnivores." the authors said. The areas that were newly colonized by tigers had an Dahod district of Gujarat over her suspected relationship with another man, police said, adding that 12 people have been held in connection with the case. The incident took place in Dhalsemai village of the district on January 28 when the mob. led by the woman's in-laws, found out about her alleged relationship with another man. According to the complaint filed by the woman on January 29. the accused found the woman at the man's residence following which she was assaulted, partially disrobed and dragged out of the house. "The woman's in-laws, suspecting her of a relationship with another villager, led a mob of around 15 people that paraded her through the town," Dahod SP Rajdeepsinh Jhala said, adding that the husband was not present at the time of the incident. As per the complaint, the mob forced her to walk around the village while they beat her with wooden sticks. They then chained the woman to a motorcycle and dragged her on the road.
